OCP Group Refuses to Participate in South Africa Trial that Undermines UN Resolution Process & International Law

Casablanca - 13 July, 2017. By deciding to hold over for trial the matter of the phosphate cargo vessel "Cherry Blossom," which was seized in South African waters in April after an unscheduled stop, the South African court has rendered a transparently political opinion and committed a serious abuse of power. This judicial over-reach threatens the freedom and security of international trade, while it contradicts core legal concepts and undermines the United Nations (UN) resolution process. Thus, participating in any trial before this forum would give further credit to a process without legal legitimacy.
